MBQH - 735I

None of the viewers had any other data than the random number (above). All the viewers had a timescale of two weeks to produce data.

Enclosed within this file are the remote viewing sessions of SiriusRV a small group of remote viewers who meet online to discuss and explore the art of remote viewing.

The Remote viewer session is:

Also enclosed is the feedback document and extra images of the target.

Target Reference Number: MBQH-7351

Feedback Disclosure:

Target: this practice target is a picture capture taken from a video taken by a friend of mine in 1992 of a set enigmatic mystery glyphs located on an archway of the Egyptian temple of Abydos, the oldest, and most revered temple from the earliest dynastic period of Egyptian culture. More specifically, the hieroglyphic images are ones that have caused a surprising amount of controversy amongst people for the last 15 years because of how much the photorealistic the glyphs appear to be of modern military transportation equipment, with one of the glyphs being called the helicopter glyph.

The target designation is the picture of the enigmatic glyphs in question, with the target cue of "the original meaning of these glyphs", with three arrows pointing to the particular glyphs that have been brought most into question and caused the greatest controversy amongst researchers, epigraphers and Egyptologists.

While people contend many different things about the glyphs, the fact is the glyphs really exist, the target picture is genuine and not touched up. Some of the glyphs so exactly match modern day transport technology that different experts will swear this means the glyphs have to have been somehow faked, it is a known fact that the glyphs are part of the original ancient temple hieroglyphics high up on an arch in the temple of Abydos, and can be subject table since some Egyptologists agree the glyphs are undecipherable. Some more radical hypotheses include the idea that somehow at some point in the our future a contingent of our own civilization and military will go back in time with this technology, and it will be recorded back in our history on the temple of Abydos for us to see today. Now that's a mind bender!

Picture immediately below was the enveloped Target MBQH-7351 captured from video I have. The photograph following the individual session feedback below is an additional photograph I thought would be helpful after reading everyone's sessions.

Summary

This target feels Strange. My ideas mention lifelines, but I can pick up any. The target feels desolate in open surroundings.

Movement of Wind was a factor at the target.

The target does feel like it has Constructed elements which have a stepped or raised area.

At points a Central linear object/Structure was important to the target - not unlike a meeting place - Central Square.

But again - feels old, past, desolate - removed.

Feels offworld in its desolation but also connected with lifelines in the past that meet the target
in our world everyday life.

10.00pm finish -
