Feedback:

The Buga Sphere is a mysterious, seamless metallic orb reportedly discovered in Buga, Colombia, in March 2025, after being observed flying over the town. It has gained viral attention for supposedly resisting heat, possessing a three-layered internal structure with fibers, and displaying unusual properties, leading to debates over whether it is extraterrestrial technology, an elaborate hoax, or an advanced art project.

Key details regarding the Buga Sphere include:

- Physical Characteristics: The sphere is about the size of a football, weighs around 4.5 pounds, and is perfectly smooth with no seams or welds.
- Anomalous Behavior: Reports suggest it remains colder than its surroundings while absorbing heat and has been described as a "topological heat sink".

- Internal Structure: X-ray images, as discussed on platforms like Reddit r/aliens, appear to show a complex, three-layered structure with 18 dense microspheres, a central chip, and silica-based fiber strands.
- External Markings: The exterior features engraved glyphs, which some analysts believe resemble human-made markings.
- Origin Theories: While some speculate it is alien technology or a biological synthesizer, experts such as cognitive neuroscientist Julia Mossbridge have suggested it is likely an artistic project, as noted in the Metro report.
